

Figure S1. Within-site Res score variability correlates with entropy

The entropy of each site is plotted against the standard deviation of Res scores at that site. This suggests that sites with higher variation in amino acid composition are more likely to exhibit spuriously high Res scores when measured with multiple partner sites.